WELLGATE FOR WOMEN

Flattering, comfortable and designed just for women, Wellgate's new orthopaedic supports are set to revolutionise the way women think about their joints. Following a survey of over 6,000 women, which showed that women's wrists are, on average, more than 10% smaller than men's, Wellgate has custom designed a range of smaller supports. The participation of women in athletic sports has significantly increased in recent years following successes at the Commonwealth Games and anticipation for the 2012 London Olympics. It is therefore surprising that women engaging in sport continue to wear bulky joint supports designed to fit men. Not only are these supports unergonomic, they are failing to provide optimum support and aid for sore and weakened joints. The need for joint supports is not limited to those participating in athletics, but extends also to popular activities such as yoga and Pilates. Professional yoga instructor Sue Fuller says about the products, "I found that each support provided both stability and flexibility to enable me to stretch the muscles supporting my joint without applying any further stress - I would recommend these supports to my students." Wellgate supports are designed to be slim fitting and subtle, while still providing strong support for women both during exercise and everyday use. The products are made of lightweight, breathable, soft materials that keep the wearer cool and comfortable. ♦ The supports can be ordered online from www.anglianpharma.com

Wellgate High Performance Knee Support, £19.99; Wellgate Ultra Light Knee Support, £9.99; Wellgate Perfect Fit Wrist Support, £12.99; and Wellgate Slim Fit Ankle Support, £8.99.

Women have support

It's no great surprise that women are smaller and curvier than men, but until now women have been slipping around in men's joint supports. Wellgate has launched a made-to-fit range of orthopaedic supports for women ranging from £8.99 to £19.99.
